

My dear colleagues,

It is my privilege to assume the office of Director General, CPWD. At the outset, I convey my heartfelt thanks and best wishes to entire CPWD fraternity. With utmost humility, I would attribute this accomplishment to the grace of god and good wishes of all of you.

We are in a time when expectations of the people of this country from Government officers and Departments is rising. Our Central Government has set high standard for performance, transparency and accountability. The National sentiments are riding high and good governance is being demanded by the various stakeholders.

Infrastructure and construction sector, being an important constituent of growth as well as a driving force for economic development, provides CPWD with an opportunity to bring out its inherent capabilities. It is a challenge to the technical competence of our 8000 odd engineers, architects and horticulturists to showcase its abilities. The reform agenda of Honorable UDM will be our guiding beacon in quest to achieve the goals set for us.

Although my tenure of DG will be short, I exhort my colleagues to make whole hearted efforts in implementing the reform agenda and make this department a shining example of efficiency and good quality in our domain of work. I extend my warm wishes to all my colleagues in their endeavor for excellence. Please feel free to seek my intervention wherever required. I am sure our esteemed organisation will continue the good work it has been doing and rise to the levels of expectations of our clients and other stakeholders.

I also take this opportunity to convey my best wishes to you and your family for a very happy and prosperous New Year, 2015.
